

"I was not paid a farthing," (p.60) Mark says about his BBC appearance with his movie.
Everybody else, including his producer, bragged that the $40,000 BBC paid was a record in Britain. Lane's producer's words are: "The most money that has ever been paid for a single transmission by anybody in the United Kingdom." $40,000 is a lot of farthings!

BBC pays a record fee for Kennedy film

NEW YORK, Thursday
The BBC has paid a two-hour film which lengths the film
Warren Commission
President Kennedy's situation, one of the co-producers said terday.

Mr. Elia de Antonio
BBC had paid $40,000 most money that has paid for a film for mission by anybody in United Kingdom.

The British screening on January 29, 1964. Mr.
Antonio said, "and cinemas will probably show the film a few days separate negotiations.

The film, Rush to has the same title of by the New York attorney, Mark Lane, who is the co-producer.

American distribution is being negotiated. Mr.
Antonio said.

The film offers interviews of 18 persons by Mr. Lane. Plus television interviews and Mr. Lane described it as a brief for the defense in the finding by the Commission headed by the U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren, which concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald had killed President Kennedy.

Associated Press.